The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 4-6, 8, and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Berthold.

Berthold discloses a tube in shell heat exchanger with a tube bundle that is spaced fairly far from the casing in the regions where the transverse baffles form gaps for the flow of shell side fluid; the tubes are shown fairly closely spaced from the shell in the side regions between the baffle edges (see Figs. 2, 3).

Claims 15-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Pflüger et al.

Pflüger et al. show a tube in shell heat exchanger with transverse baffles for shell side fluid that is oblong (rectangular) in configuration. Note that claim 15 does not specify that the window and gap distances are different.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 14 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Berthold in view of Lu.

Lu shows that it is known in the art to employ tube in shell heat exchangers of the type shown in Berthold as oil coolers for engines. In view of this, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the instant invention was made to connect the exchanger of Berthold to an engine to employ it for oil cooling purposes.

Claims 2, 3, 7, and 9-13 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

The remaining references show various tube in shell heat exchanger designs.
